Comprehensive Legal and Administrative Analysis of Statutory Breaches, Procedural Malfeasance, and Remedial Pathways within the Galway Court Office

Introduction and Scope of Analysis

This report presents an exhaustive, multi-layered analysis of a documented systemic breakdown in administrative and procedural communications between a self-representing lay litigant and the public servants operating within the Galway Court Office. The documentary evidence, consisting of exported email correspondence, reveals a profound pattern of administrative friction, deliberate communication delays, and substantive failures to accommodate a litigant with a validated, complex psychiatric disability under the Equal Status Acts and the Disability Act. Furthermore, the record highlights significant legal and procedural anomalies, including the granting of a five-year Safety Order in the respondent's absence, direct violations of statutory language rights under the Official Languages Acts, and the emergence of severe allegations regarding perjury committed by the applicant in the underlying family law proceedings.

The intersection of family law, administrative law, disability rights, and linguistic rights in Ireland creates a complex matrix of statutory duties for public bodies. In this instance, the documented interactions extend beyond mere administrative inefficiency. The evidence suggests a targeted pattern of behavior by court registry staff—specifically an individual who reportedly possessed a prior personal acquaintance with the applicant (the respondent's father). This prior knowledge, coupled with the differential treatment the respondent received across various communication mediums, raises grave concerns regarding misfeasance in public office. The respondent's communications articulate a phenomenon of "cold switching," whereby the public servant's demeanor shifted from gaslighting and speaking over the respondent during telephone conversations to strict, minimalist, and legally evasive text in written correspondence, culminating in a spiteful and triggering use of the term "Sir" when the respondent demanded the use of his legal Irish name.

This report is structured to systematically dissect these failures. First, it will establish the factual matrix through a chronological analysis of the communications, highlighting the dates, the systemic lack of adequate responses, and the specific complaints raised by the self-representing respondent. Second, it will evaluate the breaches of the Courts Service Customer Service Charter and the expected average response times. Third, it will provide a deep statutory analysis of the breaches concerning disability accommodations, equality laws, and linguistic rights. Finally, the report will outline the three distinct legal and procedural steps necessitated by these events: the immediate procedural requirements for appealing the ex parte Safety Order to the Circuit Court within the strict 14-day statutory window; the mechanisms for pursuing a criminal complaint or private prosecution for perjury under the Criminal Justice (Perjury and Related Offences) Act 2021; and the framework for initiating a High Court civil action for damages against the Courts Service and its agents, grounded in misfeasance in public office, breach of statutory duty, and the negligent infliction of psychiatric injury resulting in severe psychological trauma.

Factual Matrix and Evidentiary Timeline of Court Communications

A meticulous review of the exported communications between the respondent and the Galway Court Office demonstrates severe administrative delays, targeted communication strategies, and a failure to engage substantively with the respondent's complex legal and medical needs. The timeline illustrates the sequence of events, highlighting the critical periods of non-response that ultimately prejudiced the respondent's ability to participate in the proceedings and effectively manage his Complex Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (CPTSD).

Date	Communicator	Action and Substantive Content	Legal and Administrative Significance
24 June 2025	Respondent	Submits a Subject Access Request (SAR) to the Health Service Executive (HSE) for psychiatric and medical records.[1]	This request forms the foundation of the rebuttal evidence against the applicant's claims regarding the respondent's mental health, highlighting the necessity of an adjournment.
16 Sept 2025	Respondent	Transmits an email to the Court requesting an adjournment for the 23 September hearing (Cases GY 00164/2025 and GY 00120/2023). Discloses PTSD/Anxiety, lack of legal aid representation, and current homelessness.[1]	Represents the first formal disclosure of a psychiatric disability and an explicit request for statutory accommodation to the court registry.
18 Sept 2025	Respondent	Transmits a follow-up	Establishes the email requesting confirmation of receipt of the 16 September correspondence.[1]	beginning of a pattern of administrative unresponsiveness by the court staff.

22 Sept 2025	Respondent & Court	Urgent iteration of the adjournment request. The Court acknowledges receipt and forwards the correspondence to the presiding Judge.[1]	Intermediary staff acknowledge the communication but fail to address the substantive requests for disability accommodations or Equal Status Act considerations.
23 Sept 2025	Court	The Court grants an adjournment of the proceedings to 11 November 2025.[1]	Judicial action is taken, yet the underlying disability accommodations and communication friction with the registry staff remain entirely unaddressed.
11 Nov 2025	Court	Case GY 00120/2023 is adjourned to 10 February 2026. Case GY 00164/2025 (where the respondent was the applicant against his older brother) is struck out.[1]	The respondent's affirmative case against his brother is dismissed, while the defensive case against his father is delayed, compounding the respondent's legal jeopardy.
4 Feb 2026	Respondent	Emails the Court Registrar and Judge Lydon formally requesting an adjournment of the upcoming 10 February hearing and a remote hearing direction.[1]	Cites Section 16 of the DVA 2018 (inability to cross-examine), HSE GDPR breaches, Equal Status Acts, and the applicant's prior perjury.[1]
5 Feb 2026	Court Staff	Replies acknowledging the email, stating it will be placed on file. Addresses the	Represents a blatant failure to use the respondent's legal Irish name, initiating the respondent as "Dear Mr. Lyons".[1]	psychological trauma associated with deadnaming the respondent using his abuser's anglicized surname.

5–9 Feb 2026	Respondent	Dispatches multiple emails complaining of the misnaming, providing passport evidence, and detailing the psychological trigger of being named after his abuser.[1]	The respondent actively attempts to mitigate psychological damage and enforce rights under the Official Languages Act. The Court Office provides zero response during this critical pre-trial window.
10 Feb 2026	Respondent	Morning emails expressing despair over being ignored for a week, noting the impossibility of defending himself due to CPTSD trauma and the lack of accommodations.[1]	The Safety Order hearing proceeds in the respondent's absence, resulting in a five-year order against him.
13 Feb 2026	Court (D. Rabbitte)	Emails the respondent as "Dear Mr. Mac Liatháin," advising that a five-year Safety Order was granted in his absence. Advises of the right to appeal to the Circuit Court.[1]	Marks the first use of the correct legal name, but only after the prejudicial and traumatic outcome has already occurred.
13 Feb 2026	Respondent	Emails D. Rabbitte directly, demanding an apology, outlining the complaint process, and noting the failure to provide the legally mandated accommodations.[1]	The respondent formalizes a specific grievance against the individual public servant for hindering his legal access.
13 Feb 2026	Court Staff	Replies: "Dear Sir... The	The staff deliberately

		role of the Courts Service staff is to provide administrative support... Please see link below for complaints procedure".[1]	avoids using the respondent's legal Irish name, utilizing "Sir" in a manner perceived as highly retaliatory and mocking.
13–20 Feb 2026	Respondent	Final emails outlining the malicious intent behind the use of "Sir," the psychological damage inflicted, and the ongoing breach of the Equal Status Act.[1]	Concludes the documentary evidence of the administrative breakdown and the crystallization of the respondent's intent to pursue civil litigation.

Administrative Malfeasance and Breaches of the Customer Service Charter

Public bodies in the Republic of Ireland are bound by stringent customer service charters designed to ensure timely, respectful, and effective communication with the public. These charters are not mere guidelines; they establish the legitimate expectations of citizens interacting with the State. The Courts Service Customer Service Charter explicitly outlines the expected average response times for written communications. According to the Charter, the Courts Service commits to acknowledging receipt of correspondence within 3 to 10 working days, and providing a full substantive reply within 15 working days.[2] If a full reply cannot be issued within 15 working days, the service is obligated to provide an update indicating exactly when a resolution or comprehensive answer can be expected.[3] Furthermore, the charter explicitly promises that staff will treat all correspondence and complaints promptly, fairly, impartially, and in confidence.[2]

The documentary record reveals a stark and deliberate deviation from these standards. The respondent's urgent, pre-hearing emails sent between 5 February and 10 February 2026 contained critical disclosures regarding a severe psychiatric disability and explicit requests for statutory accommodations under the Equal Status Acts.[1] These communications were entirely ignored by the court staff.[1] The complete lack of response during the crucial window immediately preceding the 10 February hearing deprived the respondent of the opportunity to ascertain whether his request for a remote hearing had been granted. This administrative silence effectively rendered his participation impossible due to his documented CPTSD.

Moreover, the respondent's communications highlight a deeply concerning behavioral pattern by the public servants, characterized as "cold switching." The respondent explicitly notes that the manner in which the specific secretary spoke to him on the telephone was markedly different from her in-person demeanor, which again differed drastically from her written correspondence.[1] During telephone interactions, the respondent alleges the staff member spoke over him and gaslighted his ability to understand logic and conversation, pushing him to tears.[1] This hostile auditory environment contrasts with the rigid, minimalist text of the emails, where the staff member only appeared to follow the law when forced into a written, reviewable format.[1] This behavioral shifting suggests a conscious awareness of administrative oversight; the staff member allegedly utilized unrecorded telephone calls to exert psychological pressure while maintaining a façade of bureaucratic neutrality in written emails.

This environment of administrative hostility is further compounded by the respondent's allegation that the secretary in question possessed a prior personal acquaintance with his father (the applicant) and his older brother.[1] The respondent asserts that this public servant bent the rules on behalf of both his father and his older brother, effectively hindering two separate legal cases—the defensive case against his father and the affirmative case he brought against his brother (which was ultimately struck out in November 2025).[1] When a public servant leverages their administrative position to create procedural bottlenecks for one party while allegedly smoothing the path for a party with whom they have a prior acquaintance, it transcends poor customer service and enters the territory of misfeasance in public office. The failure to respond to the accommodation requests, followed by the perfunctory and mocking dismissal of his complaints on 13 February 2026, demonstrates a systemic and potentially malicious failure to adhere to the core tenets of the Customer Service Charter.[1]

Service Standard Category	Courts Service Charter Commitment	Actual Performance in Present Case	Deviation Impact
Acknowledgement	Confirm receipt within 3 to 10 working days.[2]	Multiple urgent emails (Feb 5-10) ignored completely prior to the hearing date.	Deprived the litigant of confirmation regarding remote hearing logistics.
Substantive Reply	Full reply within 15 working days, or an update if delayed.[2]	Substantive requests regarding Equal Status accommodations never addressed.	Resulted in the litigant's inability to attend the hearing, leading to an ex parte safety order.
Impartiality and Fairness	Treat all complaints fairly, impartially, and respectfully.[2]	Staff allegedly engaged in "cold switching," verbal gaslighting, and mocking terminology ("Sir").	Inflicted severe psychological trauma (CPTSD flashbacks) and compromised the litigant's legal standing.

Statutory Breaches: Disability, Equality, and Reasonable Accommodation

The respondent repeatedly invoked the Equal Status Acts 2000–2015 and the Disability Act 2005 in his correspondence, urgently requesting reasonable accommodations to facilitate his access to justice. Specifically, he requested an adjournment and a remote hearing (via Pexip) to manage his Complex Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (CPTSD) and Anxiety Disorder.[1]

Under Section 4 of the Equal Status Acts 2000–2015, discrimination includes a refusal or failure by a service provider to do all that is reasonable to accommodate the needs of a person with a disability by providing special treatment or facilities, if without such accommodations it would be impossible or unduly difficult for the person to avail themselves of the service.[4] The Courts Service, as a provider of a public service, is strictly bound by this legislation. Furthermore, Section 38 of the Disability Act 2005 mandates that public bodies ensure their services, information, and buildings are accessible to persons with disabilities.[5]

In addition to these specific acts, the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014 imposes a proactive Public Sector Equality and Human Rights Duty. Section 42 of this Act requires that a public body, in the performance of its functions, must have regard to the need to eliminate discrimination, promote equality of opportunity and treatment of the persons to whom it provides services, and protect the human rights of its service users.[7]

The registry staff's complete lack of communication regarding the respondent's requests acts as a de facto refusal of reasonable accommodation. The respondent noted that his requests for a remote hearing were met with absolute silence. A remote hearing is a highly standard, low-cost accommodation, explicitly provided for under Section 11 of the Civil Law and Criminal Law (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 2020, designed precisely for individuals whose physical attendance is rendered impossible due to medical or psychiatric vulnerabilities.[1] By ignoring this request, the Galway Court Office forced a litigant with a validated trauma disorder into an impossible position: attend a physical courthouse alongside his alleged abuser and suffer severe psychiatric deterioration, or remain absent and forfeit his right to a fair hearing.

The respondent's CPTSD diagnosis is a profoundly debilitating condition recognized in the ICD-11, characterized by severe emotional dysregulation, dissociative symptoms under stress, and intense psychological reactions to trauma triggers, including enduring negative beliefs about oneself accompanied by profound feelings of shame and guilt.[10] The court staff were placed on explicit, written notice of this diagnosis and the specific triggers associated with it.[1]

The refusal to engage with a disabled litigant's request for a remote hearing, combined with the hostile telephone interactions that triggered the respondent's flashback management protocols, demonstrates a discriminatory failure in service provision that strikes at the heart of the Equal Status Acts.[1]

Linguistic Rights and the Official Languages Acts

A highly contentious and psychologically damaging issue documented in the exported communications is the registry staff's persistent refusal to address the respondent by his legal Irish name, Cian Mac Liatháin. On 5 February 2026, the court staff addressed him via email as "Dear Mr. Lyons," utilizing the anglicized surname of his abusive father (the applicant).[1] Despite the respondent supplying both his Irish and British passports, his Teaching Council registration, his Garda vetting forms, and explicitly explaining that the use of the anglicized name was a severe psychological trigger directly linked to his CPTSD, the staff ignored these emails for days.[1] Later, on 13 February 2026, after the respondent lodged a formal complaint regarding the deadnaming, a staff member maliciously addressed him merely as "Dear Sir".[1] The respondent correctly interpreted this as a spiteful insinuation that a disabled person requesting their legal name was being overly demanding.[1]

The Official Languages Act 2003, as substantially amended by the Official Languages (Amendment) Act 2021, confers robust statutory rights upon citizens regarding the use of the Irish language. The 2021 Act significantly strengthened the rights of citizens to use their Irish names and hold public bodies accountable for their accurate recording. Section 9A of the Act (inserted into the 2003 Act) creates a strict statutory duty for public bodies to ensure the correct recording and use of a person's name in the Irish language, explicitly including the síneadh fada.[13] The legislation specifically rendered titles like "Mr." or "Sir" entirely optional, protecting the right of citizens to be addressed purely by their Irish names.[15]

Furthermore, Section 9(2) of the 2003 Act dictates a mandatory reciprocal communication duty: where a person communicates in writing or by electronic mail in an official language (Irish) with a public body, the public body shall reply in the same language.[16] The respondent explicitly communicated his desire to be addressed by his Irish name, submitting legal documentation to that effect. The deliberate misnaming of the respondent as "Mr. Lyons," followed by the spiteful and reductive use of "Sir" in a context where the respondent had explicitly requested the use of his legal name, is a direct and actionable contravention of his statutory rights under the Official Languages Acts.[15] In the context of the respondent's CPTSD, this was not merely an administrative oversight; it was a targeted linguistic microaggression that weaponized the State's administrative apparatus to inflict emotional distress and mock his identity.

Procedural Malpractice: Self-Representation and the Statutory Bar

A critical element of the respondent's communications was the explicit notification that he was representing himself due to the unavailability of a Legal Aid Board solicitor.[1] In the context of domestic violence proceedings, self-representation triggers specific, mandatory statutory safeguards that the court registry entirely failed to process.

Section 16 of the Domestic Violence Act 2018 expressly prohibits an unrepresented respondent from personally cross-examining the applicant in cases where safety or barring orders are sought.[18] This provision was enacted to protect victims from being interrogated by their abusers, but it applies equally to all unrepresented parties to ensure the integrity of the evidence. If an unrepresented respondent is statutorily barred from cross-examining the applicant, the court is legally obliged to consider whether it is necessary, in the interests of justice, to appoint a legal representative chosen by the court solely for the purpose of conducting the cross-examination.[18]

The respondent's 4 February 2026 correspondence explicitly highlighted this exact statutory bar, requesting an adjournment so that cross-examination counsel could be appointed.[1] By ignoring this correspondence, the court registry staff failed to adequately brief the judiciary on a fundamental barrier to fair procedures.[1] Proceeding to hold the hearing and grant a five-year Safety Order in the absence of the respondent—whose absence was heavily influenced by the lack of administrative clarity regarding this statutory prohibition and the refusal of a remote hearing—constitutes a profound breach of the principle of equality of arms and the constitutional right to fair procedures.

Remedial Pathway 1: Circuit Court Appeal of the Safety Order

The primary and most time-sensitive legal mechanism available to the respondent is an appeal of the District Court's decision to grant the five-year Safety Order. The respondent must separate the appeal of the family law outcome from the overarching complaints regarding perjury and administrative abuse, as the Circuit Court's jurisdiction on appeal is strictly limited to rehearing the safety order application.

Under Irish family law procedure, a decision of the District Court regarding a Safety Order can be appealed to the Circuit Court.[22] The appeal operates as a de novo hearing, meaning it is a complete, fresh rehearing of the matter before a Circuit Court judge.[23] This is highly advantageous for the respondent, as it effectively erases the procedural defects of the initial District Court hearing. It allows him to introduce the HSE medical records (once obtained) and formally apply to the Circuit Court judge for cross-examination counsel under Section 16 of the DVA 2018, ensuring the applicant's evidence is rigorously tested.[18]

Outline of the Legal Step for Appeal

Crucially, the statutory window to lodge this appeal is exceptionally narrow. The appeal documents must be served and lodged within 14 calendar days of the date the District Court order was made.[22] As the safety order was granted on 10 February 2026, the absolute deadline to execute this appeal is 24 February 2026.[1]

To successfully initiate the appeal, the respondent must execute the following sequence:

1. Completion of the Notice of Appeal: The respondent must complete a Notice of Appeal (Form 101.1), clearly outlining the decision being appealed and indicating that he is the appellant.[27]
2. Service on the Applicant: A copy of the Notice of Appeal must be served on the applicant (the father) or his solicitor. This service must be executed via registered prepaid post or personal service.[22] An email to the court does not constitute service on the opposing party.
3. Statutory Declaration of Service: Following service, the respondent must swear a Statutory Declaration of Service (Form 41.01 for Registered Post or Form 41.03 for Personal Service) before a Commissioner for Oaths or practicing solicitor. This document proves to the court that the applicant was legally notified.[27]
4. Lodgement with the Court Office: The original Notice of Appeal and the sworn Statutory Declaration of Service must be filed physically with the District Court Clerk in the Galway court area prior to the expiration of the 14-day deadline.[23]

Once these documents are lodged, the execution of the District Court order may be stayed (depending on specific bail/recognisance applications), and the case file will be transferred to the Circuit Family Law Court, where a new date will be allocated by post.[23]

Remedial Pathway 2: Criminal Prosecution of Perjury

The respondent's communications raise severe allegations of perjury against the applicant. The respondent asserts that his father previously admitted to lying to the Health Service Executive (HSE) to force the respondent into inpatient psychiatric care, and subsequently perjured himself in his sworn Information for the Safety Order by making baseless medical allegations regarding "psychotic" behavior.[1] The respondent sought an adjournment specifically to obtain HSE records via a GDPR Subject Access Request to rebut these perjured statements.[1] Historically, perjury was a common law offence in Ireland and was notoriously difficult to prosecute, requiring an exceptionally high burden of proof and specific corroboration. However, the enactment of the Criminal Justice (Perjury and Related Offences) Act 2021 placed the offence on a strict, modernized statutory footing, specifically designed to deter individuals who abuse court time by making false claims.[28] Under the 2021 Act, a person commits perjury if they give a statement material in a judicial proceeding, while lawfully sworn as a witness or on affidavit, that is false, and which they know to be false.[30] The penalties under the new legislation are severe: summary conviction carries a maximum penalty of 12 months imprisonment and a Class B fine, while conviction on indictment can result in up to 10 years imprisonment and/or a fine of €100,000.[31]

Outline of the Legal Step for Perjury Prosecution

To pursue this avenue, the respondent must formally report the perjury to An Garda Síochána. While the respondent has CC'd Garda email addresses in his civil correspondence [1], a formal criminal investigation requires a direct, structured complaint.

1. Formal Garda Complaint: The respondent must attend the Galway City Garda Station (or contact the North Western Region HQ) to make a formal, recorded complaint of perjury.[33] The respondent will be required to provide a detailed witness statement explaining the timeline of the false statements.[36]
2. Provision of Documentary Evidence: The respondent must provide the investigating Garda with the applicant's sworn Information from the District Court, alongside the contemporaneous evidence of his prior admissions of lying (e.g., text messages, third-party witness statements) and the HSE records (once obtained) proving the falsehood of the medical claims.[36]
3. Lifting the In Camera Rule: Because family law proceedings are held in camera (in strict privacy), the investigating Garda cannot simply access the court file. The Gardaí must apply to the District Court for the lifting of the in camera rule to legally access the transcripts, digital audio recordings (DAR), and sworn affidavits required to build the prosecution file.[38] Once the file is complete, it will be forwarded to the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) for a decision to prosecute.[36]
4. Private Prosecution: If the DPP declines to prosecute, or if the Garda investigation stalls, the respondent retains the common law right to initiate a private prosecution. The Irish High Court, in Kelly & Anor v. District Court Judge Ryan IEHC 321, strongly endorsed the right of private citizens to bring private prosecutions as a constitutional check against lapses by the Public Prosecutor.[40] Initiating a private prosecution for an indictable offence requires laying an information before a District Court judge, who may then issue a summons against the applicant.[39]

Remedial Pathway 3: High Court Civil Suit for Damages against the State

The most complex, yet potentially most vindicating, legal pathway for the respondent involves initiating a civil suit in the High Court against the Courts Service and the specific public servants involved. This action would seek substantial damages for the severe psychological trauma (exacerbation of CPTSD) caused by their administrative malfeasance, discrimination, and statutory breaches. This is a distinct and separate action from the family law appeal.

Cause of Action 1: Misfeasance in Public Office

The conduct of the Galway Court Office staff—specifically the deliberate misnaming of the respondent, the retaliatory use of "Sir," the conscious ignoring of statutory requests for disability accommodations, and the alleged bending of rules due to a prior relationship with the applicant—provides robust grounds for the tort of misfeasance in public office.

This is an intentional tort committed when a public official acts unlawfully in the exercise of their public powers, either with the specific intent to injure the plaintiff (targeted malice) or with subjective recklessness regarding the lawfulness of their actions and the probability of harm.[41]

The Irish courts set a high bar for this tort; mere administrative negligence or "bewildering incompetence" is insufficient (Eustace v Drogheda Borough Council).[43]

However, the respondent's case possesses unique evidentiary strengths. The respondent explicitly warned the staff in writing that utilizing his abusive father's anglicized surname was a psychological trigger causing severe trauma.[1] By proceeding to ignore his legal name and subsequently addressing him as "Sir" out of spite [1], the public servant demonstrated a conscious, subjective disregard for the respondent's psychological safety and statutory rights.

When a public servant leverages their position to create procedural bottlenecks for one party while allegedly smoothing the path for an acquaintance, and utilizes communication methods designed to trigger a known psychiatric disability, this satisfies the criteria for subjective recklessness, and arguably, targeted malice.[43]

Cause of Action 2: Negligent Infliction of Psychiatric Harm

Parallel to the misfeasance claim, the respondent can pursue damages for the tort of negligence leading to a recognized psychiatric injury. The Supreme Court in Kelly v. Hennessy established the framework for such claims: the plaintiff must suffer from a recognized psychiatric illness induced by shock, caused by the defendant's act or omission, where the defendant owed a duty of care not to cause reasonably foreseeable psychiatric injury.[45]

The respondent suffers from Complex Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, a profoundly debilitating condition where exposure to trauma triggers can cause severe emotional dysregulation, dissociative symptoms, and flashbacks.[10] The court staff were placed on explicit notice of this diagnosis and the specific triggers associated with it (the use of the abuser's name and the denial of remote accommodations).[1] Therefore, the exacerbation of the respondent's CPTSD, the induction of flashbacks requiring intensive management, and the resulting inability to defend himself in court were entirely foreseeable consequences of the staff's actions. The staff's failure to adhere to their duty of care—aggravated by their deviation from the Customer Service Charter—directly caused the psychological injury.[2] Under the Judicial Council's Personal Injuries Guidelines, compensation for severe or serious psychiatric damage can range from €50,000 to €170,000, placing this claim firmly within the jurisdiction of the High Court.[48]

Cause of Action 3: Breach of Statutory Duty

The civil suit will also be heavily grounded in the tort of breach of statutory duty, relying on the public body's failure to adhere to three distinct legislative frameworks [50]:

1. Official Languages Act Breaches: The deliberate refusal to use the respondent's legal Irish name, and the failure to reply in the Irish language, violates Sections 9 and 9A of the Official Languages Acts.[13] While the Act is primarily enforced by An Coimisinéir Teanga (who can investigate complaints and report to the Oireachtas) [51], the blatant disregard of this statutory duty feeds directly into the misfeasance and negligence claims, establishing the absolute "unlawfulness" of the public servant's conduct.[15]
2. Equal Status and Disability Act Breaches: The failure to provide an adjournment or remote hearing constitutes discrimination in the provision of a state service on the ground of disability.[12] While standard Equal Status claims must be referred to the Workplace Relations Commission (WRC) within two months of the discriminatory act (via an ES.1 form) [54], the systemic failure of the court to fulfill its Public Sector Equality and Human Rights Duty under Section 42 of the IHREC Act 2014 strengthens the overarching civil liability of the State in the High Court action.[7]

Outline of the Legal Step for the High Court Civil Suit

Initiating a High Court action requires strict adherence to the Rules of the Superior Courts. As a self-representing litigant, the respondent must navigate the following complex procedural steps to seek redress for the psychological damages and administrative abuse:

1. Lodge Administrative Complaints: Before filing the suit, the respondent must establish a paper trail of the State's failure to rectify the breaches. He must simultaneously lodge formal complaints with An Coimisinéir Teanga via their online complaint form regarding the language rights breaches [56], submit an ES.1 form to the Courts Service regarding the Equal Status breaches [54], and lodge a formal complaint with the Courts Service Inquiry Officer regarding the Disability Act 2005 breaches.[3]
2. PIAB / Injuries Resolution Board Exemption Assessment: Because the psychological injury stems from deliberate misfeasance and breaches of statutory duty rather than a standard accident, the respondent must carefully draft the pleadings. Recent jurisprudence (Patrick Dillon v. Irish Life Assurance PLC) indicates that claims for emotional distress linked to statutory breaches do not necessarily require prior authorization from the Injuries Resolution Board (formerly PIAB), though a formal psychiatric injury (CPTSD) traditionally does.[58] Cautious practice dictates submitting the personal injury element to the Board first to prevent the High Court claim from being struck out on procedural grounds.[58]

3. Drafting and Issuing a Plenary Summons: High Court civil proceedings for unliquidated damages (tort claims) are initiated using a Plenary Summons.[60] The respondent must draft the summons, which must contain an "Indorsement of Claim." This indorsement concisely outlines the parties, the nature of the claim (Misfeasance in Public Office, Negligence, Breach of Statutory Duty), the specific acts of the defendants (the deliberate misnaming, the gaslighting on the phone, the spiteful use of "Sir," the ignoring of emails, the refusal of statutory accommodations), and the resulting psychological injuries (exacerbation of CPTSD, flashbacks).[60]
4. Filing, Fees, and Service: The Plenary Summons must be stamped and filed in the Central Office of the High Court. The standard fee for sealing a Plenary Summons is €190.00.[64] Once issued, the summons must be formally served upon the Courts Service and the named public servant, typically via registered post or personal service.[66] Following service, the defendants will enter an Appearance, triggering the requirement for the respondent to draft and deliver a highly detailed Statement of Claim, fully particularizing the allegations of malice, recklessness, and psychiatric damage.[61]

Works cited

1. Gmail - Re_ URGENT_ Adjournment_Delay Request - Case No. GY 00164_2025 & GY 00120_2023 - Hearing Date 23_09_2025.pdf
2. Customer Service Charter - Workplace Relations Commission, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/contact_us/customer-service-charter/
3. Contact us - Courts.ie, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/organisation-information/contact
4. Equal Status Act, 2000 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2000/act/8/enacted/en/print
5. Customer Service - The Courts Service of Ireland - Courts.ie, accessed February 23, 2026, https://ww2.courts.ie/customer-service
6. Inquiry Officer, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.gov.ie/en/department-of-social-protection/publications/inquiry-officer/
7. Public Sector Equality and Human Rights Duty - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/government-in-ireland/human-rights/public-sector-equality-and-human-rights-duty/
8. Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act 2014, Section 42 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2014/act/25/section/42/enacted/en/html

9. The Public Sector Duty – ILMI - Independent Living Movement Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://ilmi.ie/the-public-sector-duty/
10. Complex post-traumatic stress disorder: Diagnosis and treatment - Medical Independent, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.medicalindependent.ie/clinical-news/complex-post-traumatic-stress-disorder-diagnosis-and-treatment/
11. Exploring complex-PTSD comorbidity in trauma-exposed Northern Ireland veterans - PMC, accessed February 23, 2026, https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC8979541/
12. Disability discrimination and the right to reasonable accommodation under the Equal Status Acts - IHREC, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.ihrec.ie/factsheets/disability-discrimination-and-the-right-to-reasonable-accommodation-under-the-equal-status-acts
13. Official Languages (Amendment) Act 2021 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2021/act/49/enacted/en/print
14. Official Languages (Amendment) Act 2021, Section 5 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2021/act/49/section/5/enacted/en/html
15. Síneadh Fada is now legally protected in Irish names when dealing with public bodies, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.hotpress.com/lifestyle-sports/sineadh-fada-is-now-legally-protected-in-irish-names-when-dealing-with-public-bodies-22993923
16. Official Languages Act 2003, Section 9 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2003/act/32/section/9/enacted/en/html
17. Additional Irish Language Obligations for Public Bodies - Mason Hayes Curran, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.mhc.ie/latest/insights/additional-irish-language-obligations-for-public-bodies
18. Domestic Violence Act 2018, Section 16 - Irish Statute Book, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2018/act/6/section/16/enacted/en/html
19. Domestic Violence Act 2018 - Revised Acts - Law Reform Commission, accessed February 23, 2026, https://revisedacts.lawreform.ie/eli/2018/act/6/revised/en/html
20. Protecting victims of domestic abuse from being cross-examined by perpetrators in person in family proceedings - Justice NI, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.justice-ni.gov.uk/sites/default/files/consultations/justice/con-prohibition-of-cross-examination-in%20family-proceedings.PDF
21. Domestic Violence Act 2018 - Family Lawyers Association, accessed February 23, 2026, https://familylawyers.ie/wp-content/uploads/2023/12/Domestic-Violence-2021.pptx
22. Applying for a Court Order - Safe Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.safeireland.ie/find-help/applying-for-a-court-order/

23. Appeals to the Circuit Court - The Courts Service of Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://ww2.courts.ie/appeals-circuit-court
24. Appeal Procedure — Shannons Solicitors - Expert Legal Services in Dublin, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.shannons.ie/family-law/appeal-procedure
25. Appealing a District Court Order, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/guides/appealing-a-district-court-order
26. Appeals and other applications - Ulster University, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.ulster.ac.uk/familycourtinfo/going-to-court/appeals-and-other-applications
27. Appeals - Courts.ie, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/guides/appeals
28. Prosecution of perjury to be made easier as new Act enters force, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.gov.ie/en/department-of-justice-home-affairs-and-migration/press-releases/prosecution-of-perjury-to-be-made-easier-as-new-act-enters-force/
29. The Law of Perjury in Ireland - La Touche Training, accessed February 23, 2026, https://latouchetraining.ie/the-law-of-perjury-in-ireland/
30. Fitness to Practise Update Series: Perjury - A Statutory offence in Ireland - Fieldfisher, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.fieldfisher.com/en-ie/locations/ireland/ireland-blog/perjury_a_statutory_offence_in_ireland
31. New perjury law comes into effect - The Law Society of Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.lawsociety.ie/gazette/top-stories/2021/07-july/new-perjury-law-comes-into-effect
32. Liars Beware: Implications of the Criminal Justice (Perjury and Related Offences) Act 2021, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.addleshawgoddard.com/en/insights/insights-briefings/2021/corporate/liars-beware-implications-of-the-criminal-justice-perjury-and-related-offences-act-2021/
33. Gaillimh (Galway) - Garda, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.garda.ie/en/contact-us/station-directory/gaillimh-galway-.html
34. Reporting a Crime - Crime Victims Helpline, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.crimevictimshelpline.ie/justice-process-in-ireland/reporting-a-crime
35. Useful contact numbers - Garda, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.garda.ie/en/contact-us/useful-contact-numbers/
36. Reporting a crime - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/law-enforcement/reporting-a-crime/
37. What happens when I make a report - Investigation Process - Garda, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.garda.ie/en/services/reporting/what-happens-when-i-make-a-report-investigation-process.html

38. Alleged perjury during in camera hearings can be prosecuted | Irish Legal News, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishlegal.com/articles/alleged-perjury-during-in-camera-hearings-can-be-prosecuted
39. PERJURY IS PROSECUTABLE IN IRELAND - OupaJoe, accessed February 23, 2026, http://www.oupajoe.ie/pa/Completed/Perjury_is_Prosecuteable_201003.pdf
40. The High Court of Ireland Endorses the Valuable Right of Private Prosecution - EMM Legal, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.emmlegal.com/publications/high-court-ireland-endorses-valuable-right-private-prosecution/
41. Intention, Recklessness and Misfeasance in Public Office by John Tyhurst - SSRN, accessed February 23, 2026, https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=3481227
42. Misfeasance in Public Office: a Very Peculiar Tort - bepress Legal Repository, accessed February 23, 2026, https://law.bepress.com/cgi/viewcontent.cgi?referer=&httpsredir=1&article=1290&context=unswwps-flrps11
43. Trespass Alone did not Amount to Misfeasance in Public Office without "Bad Faith", accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.mccannfitzgerald.com/knowledge/administrative-and-public-law/trespass-alone-did-not-amount-to-misfeasance-in-public-office-without-bad-faith
44. Gross negligence by local authority was not sufficient to establish misfeasance in public office - Decisis, accessed February 23, 2026, https://decisis.ie/gross-negligence-by-local-authority-was-not-sufficient-to-establish-misfeasance-in-public-office/
45. Psychological Injury I - Irish Legal Guide, accessed February 23, 2026, https://legalguide.ie/psychological-injury/
46. Nervous shock - The Law Society of Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.lawsociety.ie/gazette/in-depth/nervous-shock/
47. Negligence and compensation in a civil case - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/civil-law/negligence-and-compensation/
48. Personal Injuries Guidelines | Judicial Council, accessed February 23, 2026, https://judicialcouncil.ie/assets/uploads/documents/Personal%20Injuries%20Guidelines.pdf
49. Compensation for Psychiatric Injury - Halpin Solicitors Cork, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.halpinsolicitors.ie/compensation-psychiatric-injury/
50. Statutory Duty - Irish Legal Guide, accessed February 23, 2026, https://legalguide.ie/statutory-duty/
51. Official Languages Acts - An Coimisinéir Teanga, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.xn--coimisinir-i7a.ie/userfiles/files/new%20sub/OCT_AchtNua_EN_Prf_120625.pdf
52. General Questions about the Official Languages Act 1 - An Coimisinéir Teanga, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.coimisineir.ie/userfiles/files/FAQ001GeneralQuestionsAboutTheOfficialLanguagesAct.pdf

53. Equal Status - Workplace Relations Commission, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.workplacerelations.ie/en/what_you_should_know/equal-status-and-employment-equality/equal-status/
54. Disputes about equality and discrimination - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/employment/enforcement-and-redress/disputes-about-equality-and-discrimination/
55. The Equal Status Acts - A guide to your rights if you are discriminated against in accessing goods or services - IHREC, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.ihrec.ie/downloads/A-Guide-to-the-Equal-Status-Acts-English.pdf
56. An Coimisinéir Teanga . Complaints, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.coimisineir.ie/gearain?lang=EN
57. An Coimisinéir Teanga . Complaints Policies, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.coimisineir.ie/Complaints_Policy?lang=EN
58. Injuries Resolution Board - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/civil-law/injuries-resolution-board/
59. Supreme Court Recognises Claim For Damages For Emotional Stress Short Of Psychiatric Injury But Not As A 'Personal Injury' Claim - AOC Solicitors, accessed February 23, 2026, https://aocsolicitors.ie/supreme-court-recognises-claim-for-damages-for-emotional-stress-short-of-psychiatric-injury-but-not-as-a-personal-injury-claim/
60. High Court procedures - Citizens Information, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.citizensinformation.ie/en/justice/civil-law/high-court-procedures/
61. Prepare for court (High Court) - Courts.ie, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/organisation-information/prepare-for-court-(high-court)
62. S.I. No. 248/2005 - Rules of the Superior Courts (Personal Injuries) 2005, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2005/si/248/made/en/print
63. High Court Personal Injuries Summons, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/docs/default-source/court-forms/high-court-personal-injuries-summons.docx
64. S.I. No. 24/2014 - Supreme Court and High Court (Fees) Order 2014., accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.irishstatutebook.ie/eli/2014/si/24/made/en/print
65. Superior Courts fees: Part 4, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.courts.ie/organisation-information/superior-courts-fees--part-4
66. Service of summons | The Courts Service of Ireland, accessed February 23, 2026, https://ww2.courts.ie/rules/service-summons
67. A Guide to Litigation in Ireland - McCann FitzGerald, accessed February 23, 2026, https://www.mccannfitzgerald.com/uploads/Litigation_in_Ireland_-_An_Overview.pdf