

Comprehensive Legal, Institutional, and Regulatory Analysis: Remedial Framework for Security Misconduct, Disability Discrimination, and Administrative Dereliction at the University of Galway

1. Executive Summary

This exhaustive research report investigates a highly complex, multi-year dispute involving a severely disabled alumnus and incoming postgraduate student, the University of Galway campus security apparatus, a third-party commercial security operative, the Office of the Dean of Students, and the Private Security Authority (PSA) of Ireland. The factual matrix encompasses sustained physical and verbal assault, severe disability discrimination, defamation, jurisdictional overreach, and a cascading failure of institutional and statutory duty of care.

The subject of this analysis, Cian Mac Liatháin (also referenced in documentation as Cian Lyons), holds a uniquely layered standing within the University of Galway ecosystem. He possesses a decade-long history of good standing on the campus dating back to 2011, holds a registered External User badge for the James Hardiman Library, is a registered teaching professional, and has formally accepted an unconditional offer to commence a Master of Science (MSc) in Artificial Intelligence in September 2026. Concurrently, the subject manages a severe, highly documented neuro-psychiatric and neurological profile, specifically comprising Complex Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (CPTSD), a chronic Anxiety Disorder, and a severe brain injury resulting in myoclonic seizures.

The dispute centers on a third-party door supervisor contracted to Sult, a campus social venue managed by NUI Galway Students' Union Commercial Services Ltd (SUCS Ltd). Stemming from a negligent misstatement by the University of Galway Security Team in 2023, the operative initiated a protracted campaign of harassment, utilizing intimidation, physical force, and psychological manipulation (DARVO tactics) against the subject. This report systematically deconstructs the failures of the PSA to enforce statutory badge display regulations, the administrative malfeasance of the Dean of Students in suppressing formal complaints, and the discriminatory deprivation of the subject's required environmental coping mechanisms. Furthermore, this document provides a robust remedial framework, supplying exhaustively drafted official communications designed to compel accountability across all involved administrative and regulatory bodies.

2. Chronological Evolution and Factual Matrix of the

Dispute

The escalation of this conflict represents a profound failure of institutional safeguarding, wherein a single administrative error metastasized into a sustained campaign of abuse targeting a highly vulnerable individual.

2.1 Historical Standing and the Instigating Negligent Misstatement

The subject has maintained an active and positive presence on the University of Galway campus since 2011, culminating in the completion of a Bachelor of Arts in Mathematics and Education and the attainment of professional teaching registration. Throughout this extensive tenure, the subject utilized campus facilities, including the Sult venue, without any recorded incidents of misbehavior or disciplinary action. The environment of the Sult bar served as a central location for social gathering and study, completely independent of alcohol consumption. The subject abstains from alcohol due to clinical brain damage; however, the venue management and security personnel operated under a persistent, prejudiced presumption that his presence in a licensed premises equated to intoxication or misbehavior.

The genesis of the current conflict occurred in the summer of 2023. The University of Galway campus security team—acting as direct agents of the institution—provided explicitly erroneous information to the Sult Operations Manager. The security team falsely stated that the subject was impersonating a student and was not a fully registered disabled student at that time. Official transcripts unequivocally verify that the subject was actively engaged in academic modules and held registered student status during this period. Relying blindly upon this negligent misstatement, the venue management instructed a third-party door supervisor to remove the individual from the premises.

2.2 Jurisdictional Breach and the Hub Altercation

When the subject legitimately attempted to self-advocate and proclaim his registered status, the security operative falsely characterized this defense as "verbal abuse". This mischaracterization established a baseline of prejudice that the operative would weaponize repeatedly. Following this initial confrontation, the security operative engaged in a campaign of intimidation that vastly exceeded his legal and geographic jurisdiction.

Sult is managed by SUCS Ltd, and the jurisdiction of its contracted door supervisors is strictly confined to the licensed premises and its immediate physical entryway. The operative blatantly violated these bounds by pursuing the subject for hours over multiple days across completely separate sections of the campus estate. This culminated in a severe physical altercation outside the "Hub" (a campus eating area), where the operative attempted to violently tackle the subject to the ground. By leaving the licensed premises to pursue the subject, the operative ceased functioning as a venue door supervisor and assumed the status of a private citizen engaged in tortious harassment, assault, and false imprisonment, acting in direct contravention of the University's Event Management and Event Safety Policy (QA123). During these early altercations, the operative issued death threats and expressed indifference to committing acts of racial hatred.

2.3 The 2025 Altercations and Video Evidence

Following a period of relative calm wherein the subject engaged in amicable conversations with prominent venue staff and the head of operations, the situation deteriorated upon the specific operative's return to duty. In 2025, the operative approached the subject—who was quietly eating and studying—and aggressively roared "YOU ARE BARRED" inches from his face, shattering the subject's fragile sense of safety.

Throughout these encounters, the operative exhibited a persistent, legally actionable refusal to provide his Private Security Authority (PSA) identification badge number. This refusal was definitively captured in a video recording dated July 10, 2025, at 17:12. The transcript of this recording reveals the operative repeatedly answering "No" to lawful requests for his badge number. When informed that withholding the number constituted a felony, the operative explicitly replied, "I know," demonstrating clear mens rea (knowledge of wrongdoing) and a willful subversion of statutory regulations.

2.4 The April 2026 Assault and DARVO Tactics

The pattern of unchecked aggression culminated in a severe physical assault in April 2026. While the subject was lawfully walking away from the venue, the operative approached from behind without warning, aggressively grabbed the subject by the arm, and proceeded to laugh and mock the subject's visible trauma response.

To mask his unprovoked physical aggression, the operative systematically deployed DARVO tactics—Deny, Accuse, Reverse Victim and Offender. The operative falsely accused the subject of initiating verbal abuse, fully aware that the subject's complex neuro-psychiatric profile would make it exceedingly difficult for him to systematically refute fabricated allegations in real-time. The operative subsequently propagated defamatory falsehoods to new venue staff and the broader student body, lying about the subject's registration status and fabricating claims of misbehavior to continuously damage the subject's reputation among a new generation of university students.

3. Medical Matrix and the Architecture of Disability Discrimination

The severity of the damages accrued in this dispute cannot be quantified without a forensic understanding of the subject's medical profile. The actions of the security operative and the complicity of the university administration represent egregious violations of the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018, specifically regarding the denial of reasonable accommodation and the discriminatory deprivation of necessary environmental coping mechanisms.

3.1 Neurological Profile: Brain Injury and Myoclonic Seizures

The subject suffers from a severe clinical brain injury that manifests in myoclonic seizures. These seizures present as involuntary, uncontrollable flinching and squirming movements. The physical reality of this neurological condition dictates the subject's spatial and environmental needs. The traditional academic study environment—the silent, highly observant space of the university library—is profoundly hostile to the subject. Experiencing involuntary myoclonic jerks in a silent room draws immediate, unavoidable attention from peers, resulting in an environment that is deeply embarrassing, belittling, and psychologically distressing for the subject. Consequently, the subject relies upon the Sult bar not for the consumption of alcohol, but for its acoustic and dynamic properties. The active environment and ambient music provide an essential acoustic mask, allowing the subject to hide away and manage his myoclonic seizures without drawing unwanted attention. The Sult bar effectively functions as a necessary environmental accommodation that facilitates the subject's ability to study and participate in campus life. By violently ejecting the subject from this space based on prejudiced presumptions, the security operative severed the subject's access to his primary coping mechanism, inflicting permanent, detrimental effects on his capacity to engage in higher education.

3.2 Psychiatric Profile: CPTSD and Anxiety Disorder

The subject's neurological challenges are compounded by a severe psychiatric profile. Medical documentation from Dr. James McLoughlin of the Department of Psychiatry at University Hospital Galway confirms a diagnosis of Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (ICD-10 Code: F43.12), heavily correlated with familial trauma and the loss of a guardian, presenting clinically as Complex PTSD (CPTSD). The clinical assessment defines the impact of this condition on the subject's mental health, motivation, and emotional regulation as "Profound". Concurrently, a Needs Assessment from the University's Student Health Unit details a chronic, fluctuating Anxiety Disorder. The Head of Student Counselling and Wellbeing formally noted that anxiety is a "constant challenge" for the subject, leading to intense procrastination, impaired energy levels, and profound difficulty in high-stress environments. The sudden, aggressive physical contact from behind during the April 2026 assault constitutes a catastrophic trigger for CPTSD. The operative's subsequent behavior of laughing and mocking the subject's autonomic trauma response represents an egregious, calculated infliction of psychiatric injury that permanently altered the subject's neurological baseline and sense of safety on a campus he has inhabited for over a decade.

3.3 The Discriminatory Presumption of Intoxication

A core element of the discrimination faced by the subject is the persistent, unfounded presumption by campus security, venue staff, and the Dean of Students that his presence in a licensed premises equates to intoxication or inherent misbehavior. The subject does not consume alcohol due to the severe neurochemical risks associated with his brain injury. The manifestations of his CPTSD, anxiety, and myoclonic seizures have been persistently misread—or maliciously reframed—as erratic or drunken behavior. This prejudicial profiling strips the subject of his dignity and highlights a systemic failure within the university to train its agents and contractors in neurodivergent and trauma-informed interactions.

4. Statutory and Regulatory Failures: The Private Security Authority

The conduct of the security operative is not merely a breach of university policy; it constitutes a sustained sequence of criminal offenses. The subsequent failure of the Private Security Authority (PSA) to enforce its own statutory mandates represents a severe breakdown of state regulatory functions.

4.1 Statutory Obligations under the Private Security Services Act 2004

The private security industry in Ireland is rigorously governed by the Private Security Services Act 2004. Section 30 of the Act explicitly mandates that all licensed security personnel, specifically including door supervisors, must visibly wear their identity badge at all times while providing a security service. The PSA's own regulatory guidelines unequivocally stipulate that the license card must be displayed prominently on the upper torso, and that concealing the badge or refusing to present it is strictly prohibited. Contravening Section 30 is a criminal offense, rendering the operative liable on summary conviction to a fine of up to €4,000, imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months, or both.

4.2 Administrative Dereliction by the PSA Enforcement Division

The subject meticulously documented these breaches, reporting the operative's repeated refusal to display his badge and his acts of physical assault to the PSA across 2025 and 2026. While David Moloney of the PSA Enforcement team acknowledged receipt of these reports (INT/2025/0305, 0322, 0330) in July 2025, the Authority engaged in a systematic abdication of its enforcement responsibilities.

In a correspondence dated April 30, 2026, the PSA formally responded by entirely dismissing the relevancy of the Section 30 badge violations. The Authority advised the subject that "alleged assaults are a criminal matter and are the responsibility of An Garda Síochána," stating the PSA would merely review the outcome of any prospective Garda investigation. This response constitutes a profound administrative failure. While physical assault indeed falls under the jurisdiction of An Garda Síochána, the failure to display a PSA identity badge is an independent, strict liability regulatory offense that resides exclusively within the PSA's statutory purview. By refusing to process the incontrovertible video evidence of the Section 30 violation unless the disabled subject navigates the adversarial criminal justice system to secure an assault conviction, the PSA is actively shielding a rogue operative from regulatory scrutiny. The PSA is effectively demanding that a victim with profound CPTSD shoulder the burden of state enforcement, thereby abandoning its mandate to protect the public from unlicensed or non-compliant security personnel.

5. Institutional Governance and the Subversion of Campus Policy

The continued exposure of the subject to physical and psychological harm is the direct result of administrative malfeasance at the highest echelons of the University of Galway, specifically concerning the deliberate misinterpretation of campus access policies and complaint procedures.

5.1 Verification of Alumni Rights and External User Protections

The Dean of Students, Professor Ciara Meehan, allegedly informed the subject that as an "alumnus," he is entirely unprotected by the policies of the campus, utilizing this rationale to ignore his right to report the security operative's conduct. This assertion represents a catastrophic misinterpretation of the University's own foundational governance documents. The subject is in possession of a valid University of Galway External User library card (Uimh. No.: 44416038). The rights associated with this card are strictly codified under the University's Accessing the Library Policy (QA822). Policy QA822 explicitly recognizes graduates as integrated external users, granting them free, lifetime access to the James Hardiman Library, its open print collections, and its individual study spaces. The issuance of this card establishes a continuous, contractual relationship between the alumnus and the institution. The subject is not a trespasser or a member of the general public; he is a formally recognized, policy-backed stakeholder within the campus estate.

5.2 The Malfeasance of the Dean of Students (QA611 and QA616)

The Dean's refusal to process the subject's grievances violates the explicit terms of the University of Galway Student Complaints Procedure (QA611). Policy QA611 unequivocally states that it is open to any person who was a registered student, provided the acts or omissions being complained of occurred while they were still a registered student. The genesis of this entire dispute—the negligent misstatement by the University Security Team and the initial assault by the bouncer outside the Hub—occurred in 2023, during which time the subject's official transcript proves he was a fully registered student. Consequently, the Dean of Students possessed a strict, inescapable administrative mandate to investigate the origin of the complaint.

Furthermore, the subject holds an Unconditional Letter of Acceptance for the MSc in Artificial Intelligence, with a paid deposit, commencing September 2026. He is, therefore, an incoming student whose impending academic progression is actively threatened by the unmitigated presence of a violent security operative. Under the Student Code of Conduct (QA616), the university guarantees fair procedures, natural justice, and protection from harassment. The Dean's dismissal of the complaint effectively denied the subject these fundamental contractual rights, enabling the bouncer to utilize DARVO tactics and bypass all formal disciplinary adjudications to enact a vigilante barring order.

5.3 Breach of Institutional Duty of Care

By suppressing the QA611 complaint, the Dean of Students failed to address a known, hostile threat operating on the campus. The complaint served as formal, documented notice to the university that a third-party contractor was engaging in ultra vires behavior targeting a specific, vulnerable individual. The administrative inaction allowed the operative to remain in his position without censure. Under Irish tort law, the university breached its non-delegable duty to provide a safe campus environment, rendering the subsequent physical assault in April 2026 a direct, reasonably foreseeable consequence of the Dean's negligence, opening the institution to immense vicarious liability.

6. Remedial Framework: Drafted Official Communications

To immediately halt the ongoing discrimination, compel statutory enforcement, and establish an incontrovertible paper trail for prospective High Court litigation, the following official communications have been exhaustively drafted. These documents synthesize the factual matrix, the medical reality of the subject's disabilities, and the precise legal violations committed by each respective body.

The following documents are drafted for immediate deployment by the subject or the subject's legal representatives.

6.1 Official Communication to the Sult Bar Management (SUCS Ltd)

Subject: URGENT LEGAL NOTICE: Demand for Immediate Removal of Security Operative, Revocation of Unlawful Barring, and Offer of Amends for Defamation and Disability Discrimination

To the Board of Directors, NUI Galway Students' Union Commercial Services Ltd (SUCS Ltd), and the Operations Management of Sult,

Formal notice is hereby served regarding the sustained, tortious, and ultra vires conduct of a third-party door supervisor currently contracted at the Sult venue. The operative in question—identifiable as the individual recorded explicitly refusing his PSA badge on July 10, 2025, and who committed an unprovoked physical assault in April 2026—has engaged in a multi-year campaign of harassment, physical battery, and severe defamation against a highly vulnerable, disabled alumnus, registered teacher, and incoming MSc student.

It is a matter of factual record that the instigating event in 2023 was predicated on a negligent misstatement by campus security regarding my registration status. Relying upon this error, your operative exceeded all legal and geographic jurisdictions by pursuing me across the campus estate, attempting a physical tackle outside the Hub. This action is explicitly prohibited under the University's Event Management and Event Safety Policy (QA123), which denies venue security any unilateral enforcement authority over the broader campus.

Furthermore, your operative's assertion that I am "barred" is legally vacuous. I possess an absolute, policy-backed right to be present on campus under the Library Access Policy (QA822) via my External User card (Uimh. 44416038), and I hold an unconditional offer for the MSc in Artificial Intelligence commencing September 2026.

Crucially, the operative's actions constitute severe disability discrimination under the Equal Status Acts 2000-2018. I suffer from a severe clinical brain injury resulting in myoclonic seizures, alongside CPTSD and an Anxiety Disorder. The silent environment of the library exacerbates the humiliation of involuntary physical flinching. The active, acoustic environment of the Sult venue serves as an essential, non-alcohol-related coping mechanism, allowing me to study without drawing belittling attention. By violently ejecting me based on a prejudiced, medically ignorant presumption of intoxication, and by utilizing DARVO tactics to falsely accuse me of verbal abuse, your operative has unlawfully severed my access to a vital environmental accommodation.

Following the April 2026 assault, the operative propagated highly defamatory falsehoods to new venue staff and students, alleging I am a predator, suffered a psychotic break, and incited violence. This has devastated my decade-long reputation and caused the revocation of my academic references.

As the occupier of the premises, SUCS Ltd holds a non-delegable duty of care and strict vicarious liability for the actions of its contracted security personnel. You are formally directed to immediately:

1. Terminate the deployment of this specific security operative at the Sult venue.
2. Draft and circulate an internal memorandum to all venue staff functioning as a formal "Offer of Amends" under the Defamation Act 2009, explicitly clarifying that I was falsely accused, hold good standing as a disabled alumnus, and possess an unencumbered right to access the premises.

Failure to execute these remedial steps within seven (7) days will result in the inclusion of SUCS Ltd as a primary defendant in High Court plenary proceedings for assault, defamation, and psychiatric personal injury.

6.2 Official Communication to the University of Galway Security Team

Subject: FORMAL GRIEVANCE: Negligent Misstatement, Prejudicial Profiling, and Demand for Record Rectification

To the Head of Security and the Buildings Office, University of Galway,

This correspondence serves as a formal demand for the immediate rectification of institutional security records and a formal complaint regarding the gross negligence and discriminatory profiling exhibited by the University of Galway Security Team.

In the summer of 2023, members of your team provided explicitly erroneous information to the Sult Operations Manager, falsely stating that I was not a registered student. This negligent misstatement directly initiated a cascade of physical and psychological abuse by a third-party venue operative. My official university transcript irrefutably proves my registered status during that period.

This error is part of a broader, deeply concerning pattern of prejudice. In 2019, your personnel forcibly removed me from campus facilities under the fabricated assumption that I was a "homeless" trespasser, demonstrating a complete failure to recognize or accommodate my severe neuro-psychiatric disabilities. I suffer from a brain injury causing myoclonic seizures, alongside CPTSD. My physical manifestations of these disabilities have been persistently and maliciously profiled by your team as intoxication or misbehavior.

I am a recognized alumnus with a decade-long history of good conduct, an external library user (Card No. 44416038), and an incoming postgraduate student for the MSc in Artificial Intelligence (ID: 26293966). The Security Team is hereby formally requested to:

1. Review all internal dispatch records pertaining to my profile from 2019 to the present.
2. Issue a formal, written retraction of the 2023 negligent misstatement to the management of Sult and the Dean of Students.
3. Ensure that all current security personnel are briefed on my lawful presence and my specific neurological disabilities to prevent any further discriminatory profiling or harassment.

6.3 Official Communication to the Private Security Authority (PSA)

Subject: NOTICE OF INTENT TO SEEK JUDICIAL REVIEW (ORDER OF MANDAMUS):

Dereliction of Statutory Duty under Section 30 of the Private Security Services Act 2004

To Mr. David Moloney and the Enforcement Division, Private Security Authority (PSA),

Formal notice is hereby served regarding the PSA's repeated, systemic failure to execute its statutory enforcement mandate. Across multiple reports over the past year (including INT/2025/0305, 0322, 0330), I provided the Authority with irrefutable evidence—including video documentation dated July 10, 2025—demonstrating a door supervisor operating at the University of Galway persistently refusing to provide his PSA identity badge number, actively concealing it, and verbally admitting to committing a felony by doing so.

Under Section 30 of the Private Security Services Act 2004, it is a strict statutory requirement for licensed security personnel to prominently display their identity badge. Failure to do so constitutes a criminal offense. In your correspondence dated April 30, 2026, the Enforcement Division unlawfully dismissed my complaint by conflating the regulatory breach of Section 30 with the separate criminal matter of physical assault, advising me that the PSA will not proceed unless I engage An Garda Síochána regarding the assault.

This stance represents a profound administrative dereliction. An Garda Síochána's jurisdiction over the physical battery does not absolve the PSA of its exclusive statutory duty to investigate, penalize, and revoke the license of an operative brazenly violating Section 30. By refusing to process the evidence of the badge violation, the PSA is actively shielding a rogue operative, protecting his anonymity, and placing the burden of regulatory enforcement onto a victim suffering from severe, documented CPTSD and a traumatic brain injury. If the PSA does not immediately open a formal investigation into the Section 30 violations, identify the operative using the provided multimedia evidence, and initiate license revocation proceedings, I will instruct legal counsel to seek leave from the High Court for an Order of Mandamus to legally compel the Authority to perform its mandatory public duty.

6.4 Official Communication to the Dean of Students

Subject: FORMAL GRIEVANCE: Administrative Malfeasance, Suppression of QA611 Complaint, and Demand for Protection of Academic Rights

To Professor Ciara Meehan, Dean of Students, University of Galway,

This correspondence formally addresses the profound administrative dereliction of duty exhibited by your office regarding the sustained harassment, physical assault, and disability discrimination I have suffered on this campus.

In September 2024, I submitted a formal Stage 2 complaint under the Student Complaints Procedure (QA611) detailing the negligent misstatement by the University Security Team that triggered a campaign of physical and psychological abuse by a third-party bouncer. As the designated Complaints Officer, you possessed a strict institutional mandate to investigate this matter. Instead, you ignored my right to seek redress and explicitly stated that as an "alumnus," I am not protected by any campus policies.

This assertion is demonstrably false and constitutes administrative malfeasance. Policy QA611 explicitly applies to former students regarding acts that occurred while they were registered, which my transcript proves I was in 2023. Furthermore, I am actively tethered to this institution via the External User Library Access Policy (QA822), and I hold a paid, unconditional offer for the MSc in Artificial Intelligence commencing September 2026. Therefore, I am fully protected by the Student Code of Conduct (QA616), which guarantees fair procedures and natural justice. By failing to investigate the origin of the dispute and arbitrarily dismissing my complaint, you breached the University's non-delegable duty of care. The subsequent physical assault I endured in April 2026—where the operative grabbed me from behind and mocked my CPTSD and myoclonic seizure trauma responses—is a direct, foreseeable consequence of your administrative inaction. I require the active environment of the Sult venue as a necessary disability accommodation to manage the physical manifestations of my brain injury without the belittling scrutiny inherent to the silent library. Your failure to intervene has allowed a contractor to discriminatorily sever my access to this required environment.

You are formally required to:

1. Immediately retroactively process the QA611 complaint regarding the Security Team's initial negligence.
2. Coordinate with SUCS Ltd to permanently remove the offending security operative from the campus estate to ensure my physical safety and that of my family, who are also students here.
3. Establish an absolute academic ring-fence protecting my incoming MSc enrollment, ensuring that my right to study is not further hindered or retaliated against due to your office's failure to enforce campus policy.
